

Purpose:

It is the responsibility of all staff to ensure that anyone wishing to make a formal complaint about DOHA's programme and/or ways of working is able to do so in an accessible way.

Sound and fair judgement will be required at each stage of the process to ensure effective and efficient implementation.

Introduction:

Increasing our accountability to individuals, communities and partners for and with whom we work is a key objective for DOHA. As part of this, an organisation-wide public complaints policy has now been agreed.

There is an important difference between complaints and feedback. Feedback can be both positive and negative and is generally to do with minor issues; it can be given formally or informally. Complaints are often to do with more serious issues, when things have gone wrong and when whoever makes the complaint wants a change to occur.

In setting up a complaints mechanism, we are demonstrating our openness to learning: we recognise that we are fallible, that we do make mistakes and that we can learn from them. A cultural shift is required in order that we welcome and encourage complaints as helpful information rather than avoiding them and seeing them as failure.

A complaints mechanism needs to be proactive in seeking out complaints that need to be made: most of those with and through whom we work, almost without exception, find themselves in an unequal power relationship with NGO workers.

Key Principles:

- Complainants must be treated with respect. Staff receiving complaints must listen, accept the complaint, and be courteous and committed to solving the complaint.
- If complaints can be solved (relatively) immediately and on the spot then staff must be encouraged (and managed) to do so.
- If a complaint is not (relatively) immediately solvable it needs to be recorded on a standard Complaints Registration form. Once a complaint has been written down it is considered to be a formal complaint and becomes the responsibility of the Chairman of the Board (CB). If the complaint is about the CB then it becomes the responsibility of the Board of Directors (BD).
- Complaints must be dealt with in confidence. And the principle of confidentiality needs to be made clear to complainants.
- Formal complaints must be replied to within 10 working days of receiving them.

- If a complaint is not upheld and the complainant remains unhappy they have a right to appeal (once). They must be informed of this right. Appeals go to and are the responsibility of the BD.

Implementing the Complaints Mechanism:

There are up to 5 stages to handling informal and formal complaints respectively:

1. advertising the complaints mechanism
2. receiving complaints
3. clarifying complaints (informal and formal)
4. resolving the complaint:
 - a. immediately if resolving an informal complaint
 - b. investigating complaints – for formal complaints
5. learning from complaints and amending our practice appropriately

1. Advertising and communicating the existence of DOHA's public complaints policy:

Ensure that the right to complain is well known, that the mechanism by which complaints can be made is clear and well known and that we will maintain confidentiality at all times.

Advertising/communication the above can be done in any number of ways, such as: mentioning/explaining it in meetings with communities, posters around project sites, in schools, on the back of ration/entitlement cards, by radio, in newspapers, in offices, in local government offices, etc.

Staff should make partners aware of the complaints policy as part of any discussion around continuing or setting up a new partnership.

2. Receiving complaints:

Ensure that it is clear to staff, partners and to the community at large to whom and how complaints can be made. HR will need to talk through the complaints policy with staff likely to receive complaints to ensure that they understand the rationale behind the complaints policy.

Receiving complaints can be done in any number of ways and decisions must be made (in conjunction with the local community as appropriate) as to what is most appropriate. Some suggestions: have an open door policy; have an open door policy once a week; have one designated staff member that is always accessible; have a mobile complaints team; have a complaints clinic at distribution or active project sites; involve the local authorities (this has been known to work!); use feedback/complaints boxes.

Remember, we need to be proactive about hearing complaints and feedback and we need to make the means by which this will happen as accessible (and this means as appropriate) as possible. Staff receiving complaints must be able to listen, to accept the complaint and to be respectful – even if the complaint is not one that DOHA is able to respond to the complainant is aggrieved in some way.

3. Clarifying the complaint (informal and formal):

All staff who receives complaints need to be able to do two important things: clarify what the complaint is and determine whether it is one to which DOHA is able to respond.

DOHA defines a complaint as ‘an expression of dissatisfaction about the standards of service, actions or lack of action, by DOHA or its staff and volunteers’.

Staff receiving and clarifying complaints need to be capable of analysis, patience, and diplomacy. If a complaint does not fit the above definition then the complainant should, politely, be turned away. If the complaint is about another NGO then this should be pointed out to the complainant; if it is possible to direct the complainant to someone else who will deal with their complaint then this should be done.

In order to establish what the complaint is and its validity, interpreters might be needed. The complaint registration form (attached) should be filled in and signed by both DOHA and the complainant. Once filled out and signed, the complaint registration forms must go directly to the PM.

4. Resolving complaints:

4.1 Resolving complaints locally and informally:

The majority of complaints DOHA receives will be resolved immediately with common sense and knowledge of the programme. Staff must be encouraged and supported to do this if at all possible. If a complaint is immediately resolved, it is still good practice to fill in the complaint registration form, adding what was done to remedy the complaint. Complaint registration forms should be kept – confidentially - by the PM.

4.2 Resolving formal complaints (with some kind of investigation)

Some complaints about programmes and/or staff ways of working cannot be resolved immediately or easily. If complaints are programme related, they are likely to require time, effort and analysis to resolve – but they should be resolvable in countries where we have operative teams and resources. Others may be more complex and may require additional support (eg. audit, regional staff, etc).

Once a decision has been made on how to resolve a complaint this should be acted upon as soon as possible.

The complainant should be informed that their complaint has or hasn't been upheld:

- If complaint is upheld, advise the complainant that action has been taken. It is sometimes important, for the sake of confidentiality that the complainant is NOT told what action has been taken: this is most likely to be the case in sexual misconduct allegations. In addition it is important to inform staff that a complaint has been received, investigated and action taken. This step can be vital in maintaining/restoring staff moral and upholding our wish to be an accountable organisation. Again it is important that the principle of confidentiality is upheld: sometimes it will not be possible to tell staff precisely who is involved and what action has been taken.

This, in most cases, will be the end of a complaints process. The complaint registration form should be updated with the actions taken and held by the PM who will ensure confidentiality.

- If a complaint is not upheld, the complainant must be informed of this and of their right to formal appeal, taking the complaint to the Board of Directors. Staff should contact the complainant within 10 working days of receiving the complaint to advise the complainant of the decision; if a decision has not been reached, the complainant should be provided with a progress report with an indication of a likely date of conclusion.

5. Learning and improving/changing practice:

A key part of the complaint process is to identify any issues that need to be addressed in our programme delivery and/or ways of working so that similar complaints do not arise. This will be the responsibility of staff receiving the complaint, especially if the issue is at a local level, with overall responsibility resting with the PM for country-level learning.

DOHA is a member of the Australian Council for International Development (ACFID) and is committed to the full adherence to the ACFID Code of Conduct which defines minimum standards of governance, management and accountability of development for non-government organisations (NGOs).

Complaints relating to a breach of the ACFID Code of Conduct can be made to the ACFID Code of Conduct Committee by email to: complaints@acfid.asn.au or phone: 02 6281 9220. <http://www.acfid.asn.au>

Reviewing the Public Complaints Policy

DOHA Public Complaints Policy will be reviewed every two years.
